When it comes to perspective, you can use perspective from the start of the installation, or switch, so this is a Photoshop CS8 function. I've been using the "Swipe to Correct Perspective" in Lightroom for a while now. It seems to work better up to a certain point. Adobe gave a lot of questionable ideas in Photofiltre 3, such as:

- Change the size of the "Perspective" tool when you're holding CTRL and scrolling the cursor.
- Switch the size of the "Project" tool using the keyboard shortcuts.
- Decrease the size of the "Fill and Stroke" tools.
- Adding a 50% point of view to a logo by dragging a cursor at the 50% point.
- Using the perspective zoom when making a perspective shift into the background.
